

Introducing collection course ordering

2024-02-29 - Ester Andersson - Product Highlight

We are thrilled to unveil an exciting new feature: the ability to arrange courses within collections. This enhancement empowers you to provide your learners with a structured roadmap for their educational journey. Now, you can prescribe a recommended course completion sequence, ensuring a smooth and logical progression through your learning program.

Whether certain courses must be tackled in a specific order to meet prerequisites or to optimize comprehension, or if arranging them simply streamlines the learning path, this feature offers clarity for learners as they can now navigate through your content with confidence, knowing the optimal sequence to follow.

To order courses within a collection, go to the collection page and use the + and - to arrange the order.

The screenshot displays the 'Catalog builder' interface for a collection titled 'New at Learnifier'. The page is currently hidden from learners. Under the 'Courses' section, three courses are listed: 'Preboarding', 'Onboarding', and 'Cyber-security training'. Each course has a number in a box (1, 2, 3) with minus and plus signs to adjust its position. A green arrow points to the plus sign of the first course, indicating the ordering mechanism. To the right, there is a 'Collection settings' button and status indicators for 'Visibility: Active' and 'Categories: No categories selected'. A pink banner with the text 'Get the Learn Leads' and an ice cream cone icon is also visible.

Order	Course Name	Status
1	Preboarding	Active
2	Onboarding	Active
3	Cyber-security training	Active
